Oriental spa: TURKISH HAMAM

The hamams that embellish the contemporary Spa centers are not just places to bathe in, they are still a part of the Turkish daily life.

Words: Aydan Sümercan

A hamam which is located in a Spa center is a small example of a traditional Turkish Hamam. Nevertheless, it lifts you off the exterior world with its unique architecture as it is in Galatasaray Hamam.

hat's interesting about the Spa centers that bring together health, aesthetics and beauty is that they provide an atmosphere in which the East and West and natural care and technology all come together in a serene setting. As a tradition spanning back several centuries, the Turkish Hamam is an integral part of the Spa centers all around the world and the hotels in the Mediterranean resorts of Turkey. What makes the Turkish Hamam stand out is the extensive use of natural materials and methods. Within the unique ambiance of the Hamam everything is natural, from detoxifying by sweating with steam to peeling by a bath glove, and cleansing with the foam of olive oil soaps.

Turkish Hamam in Spa Centers

A hamam which is located in a Spa centre is a small example of a traditional Turkish Hamam. Nevertheless, it lifts you off the exterior world with its unique architecture: with the daylight beaming through the dome, the heated marble platform (göbek taşı) at the centre, the marble wash basins (kurna) here and there, the steam in the air, the heat that reaches up to 50 degrees centigrade, and bodies wrapped in the waist cloths, the hamam actually has an erotic feel to it. You have to undress, get wrapped in a waist cloth and pick up your towel. Under a cloud of steam, you'll be entering the hamam. First you need to sweat on the "göbek taşı". By sweating you'll be ridding yourself of toxins while the pores on your skin open up and the dead skin cells soften. Then the "tellak" will rub you with a bath glove made of raw silk and rid you of your dead skin cells, in other words apply "peeling". Then he will rinse you with loads of water. After rinsing, he will apply pure soap foam all over your body and will massage you with natural fibers. At this stage you'll be feeling your skin breathe and relax. Now you can go to your "kurna" and wash yourself by pouring water from a traditional hamam bowl, and if you like you can exhilarate yourself with a cold shower. You find the hamam too hot? No worries; you can wrap up and go to the cold chamber of the hamam, and relax with herbal teas or refreshment. However in a Spa center, the place you'll go after the hamam is the resting hall.

Additionally, the Spa center of the hotel you're staying at might have enriched the hamam experience with several different applications such as a rejuvenating massage with aromatic oils, and an application of a moisturizing cream all over your body as a grand finale to your hamam experience. "The hamam pleasure" as it is described in Turkish, indicates that life was much more different in traditional hamams, where social activities took place.

History of the Turkish Hamam

The concept of bathing in an indoor environment goes back to ancient Indian, Egyptian, Greek and Roman civilisations. When they arrived in Anatolia, the Turks brought with them the Islamic rules of hygiene. Upon their arrival, they were introduced to the Roman and Byzantine bathing culture, and developed a special architectural concept which they called the hamam. Thus, two cultures of hygiene met under the same roof; the Turkish hamam developed its own tradition and designed its initial layout. The traditional public hamams adopt an architecture dominated by curved lines. They are made up of three sections: the changing area; the bathing area with wash basins and marble platforms accessed through the cold section; and the heating area positioned underneath the hamam. The permanent fixtures of every hamam are the waist cloths, wooden platform clogs called "nalin", a hamam bowl, raw silk bath gloves, and fibers to apply soap. The traditional drink of the hamam is a soft drink, the "gazoz". Hamams demonstrate the most exquisite examples of Ottoman architecture especially in Istanbul and Bursa. According to records, during the Ottoman times, only in Istanbul, there were 14.536 hamams. 155 of them were public hamams, and the rest were the hamams in the mansions and palaces. This indicates the importance attributed to hamams by the nobility.

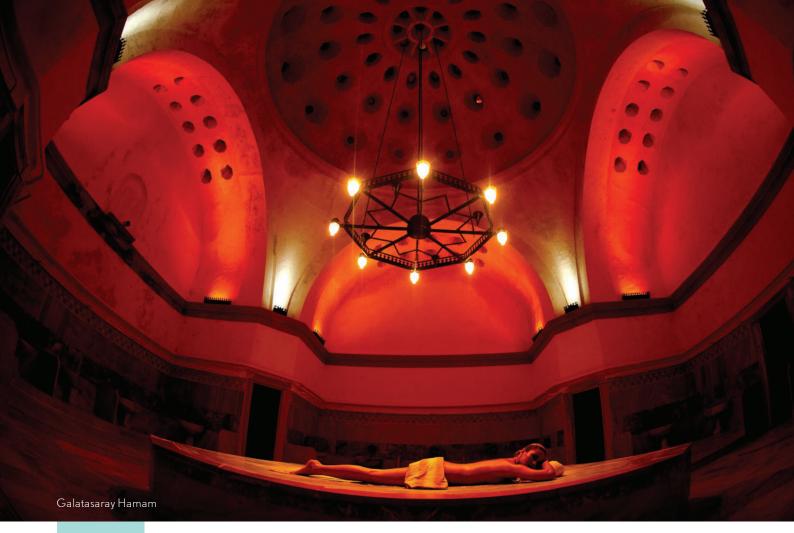

The Turks never regarded the hamam as a place just to bathe; hamam was a part of everyday life. As a place to spend the whole day, hamam was a place where time almost stood still. Hamams were open to all, from the rich to the poor. Women and men went to the hamam on the days allocated to each or bathed in designated sections. The hamam had other meanings especially for women: entertaining guests at the hamam was a tradition; hamams were also the place where mothers went to look for suitable brides for their sons. It was also the place where pre-wedding henna ceremonies and waxing took place, not to mention its function as a social gathering where women exchanged latest gossips.

A day before the trip to the hamam, special hamam bundles were prepared. On the actual day, all the pastries, dishes and refreshments that were prepared in advance were placed in a basket. Finally they would set off to spend a whole day in the hamam. The day would be dedicated to the "hamam pleasure". Wrapped in "peştemals", women would enter the hamam wearing their wooden clogs and take their places on the marble platform to sweat, scour themselves with the bath gloves, apply henna, get waxed and while doing these, they would all sing, eat, drink and enjoy the day at the hamam. There would be no concept of time! Even today, most neighborhood hamams continue these traditions.

The permanent fixtures of every hamam are the waist cloths, wooden platform clogs called "nalin", a hamam bowl, raw silk bath gloves, and fibres to apply soap. The traditional drink of the hamam is a soft drink, the "gazoz".

There are three historical hamams in Turkey that are known throughout the world, and all of them are in Istanbul: Çemberlitaş Hamam, Cağaloğlu Hamam and Galatasaray Hamam.

Up and running hamams

A real "hamam pleasure" with all of its features can only be experienced in a historical hamam. There are three historical hamams in Turkey that are known throughout the world, and all of them are in Istanbul: Çemberlitaş Hamam, Cağaloğlu Hamam and Galatasaray Hamam. The Cağaloğlu Hamam appeared at the top of a list featuring the best hamams in the world, in the travel pages of the British daily The Guardian. The list of the celebrities who bathed here include: King Edward VIII of England, composer Liszt, Florence Nightingale, Rockefeller, ballet dancer Nureyev, Cameron Diaz. The list continues with many more stars, authors, painters and actors. Cağaloğlu Hamam, with its Baroque style architecture stands apart from the others with its Ottoman architectural features. Built in 1741 during the reign of Sultan Mahmut I, the Cağaloğlu Hamam has two adjacent sections for women and men respectively, and is the last big hamam to be built in Istanbul.

The oldest of these hamams is the Galatasaray Hamam which was built in 1481 during the reign of Sultan Beyazid II. One of the most exquisite specimens of Ottoman architecture, it is located right at the centre of the city. The Çemberlitaş Hamam is one of the later works of Architect Sinan and it was built in 1854 by Nurbanu Sultan, wife of Sultan Selim II and mother of Murat III.

All these three hamams carry the Turkish bathing tradition to contemporary times, defying the notion of time. The tourists who visit these hamams are usually awed by the concept of the Turkish Hamam and the entertainments they offer.

When you go to one of these historical hamams in order to experience a true "hamam pleasure", you are greeted at the entrance and led to the dressing cabins. You undress and put on your waist cloth, slip into the wooden clogs and enter the hamam. First thing you'll notice is the marble floor, the daylight beaming through the holes in the above dome, the marble platform with it central position, the wash basins around it, the hot cloisters which are called "halvet", and the mist created by the intense steam. The heat is almost 50 degrees centigrade! First you sweat on the marble platform or by the wash basin, and the pores of your skin open up, preparing the skin for scrubbing. Then the "tellak" rubs you with the wash glove. Your blood circulation increases and your skin cells get exfoliated. After the scrub, the tellak distributes foam all over your body with the fiber. After the soap bath you rinse yourself with lots of water. After bathing you can remain in the hamam as much as you like. Do not hurry; rest in the cooler section of the hamam, drinking tea or fruit juice before you leave.

These hamams provide hamam entertainment with shows prepared for large tourist groups. While the guests are sweating on the marble platform, musicians play traditional music and belly dancers demonstrate their dancing skills. This constitutes the tourist version of the Turkish Hamam.

Apart from the Cağaloğlu and the Galatasaray Hamams, the neighbourhood hamams carry on the tradition as lively as it ever was. The best known of these old hamams are the Gedikpaşa Hamam, Kadırga Hamam and the historic Hoca Paşa Hamam. Hamam bundles are still prepared, the food is placed in the baskets, henna is applied and waxing takes place, with the ultimate pleasure of ending the day at the hamam with a refreshing bottle of 'gazoz'.

Life itself is a design

Creator of the world famous Derin brand, Aziz Sanyer has been interested in design since the age of two. He shares the secrets to his success in the world of design and reminds us that we can reach any goal through our dreams and imagination.

Interview: Müge Serçek

You started designing things in childhood, didn't you?

There are various reasons why things exist in the universe, be they living or not. I always believed that whatever power created the universe, we are a part of that power. From the earliest times to our present day, humankind has undergone some extraordinary changes – something that is plain to see from the level of technological advancement that we have attained today. Everybody has a creative capacity and talent, from little kids to old villagers. People mostly use this capacity to see to their most basic and immediate needs, mainly to ease their work. This isn't just the case with design but with all professions. Whether one is in marketing or is a bureaucrat, they make designs to ease their jobs and their work. It's also a form of creativity to be able to design life itself. Even though I was a child, I could always sense that my creative side was very strong, and those around me made me feel this too. Eventually my dexterity and creativity with my hands went on to become my career. Even when I was two years old, my most important toy was my carpenter's set. In those days toys weren't plastic, they were mostly miniatures of real things that were made out of wood. I used to cut and create little objects with my carpenter's set. Later on I developed an interest in my mother's sewing machine, and I started snipping and sewing some clothes up.

How did you develop your talent later on?

By the time I was 16, I created all the things that were in my room, building some, applying a new look to others.

How was your family life? What was your childhood like? My father was an officer and we were a "democrat" family

My father was an officer and we were a "democrat" family. Due to my father's profession, we had to move every four years. Our furniture and belongings would always arrive 15-20 days after we arrived at our new home. That's why, for that short period of time, we had to make do with simple and practical belongings. So we found ways to build certain things and convert other things into new and multi-purpose uses. Also sometimes the old belongings wouldn't suit our new house and so l'd try and change their design, color, look, etc.

It seems you're quite involved with philosophy...

I don't read and research much, but I do like to make observations and learn from my experiences. I jot down words and phrases that I like and I try to incorporate them into my life.

Einstein said "Imagination is more important that knowledge. Knowledge is limited, but imagination embraces the world." That quote seems to be one of those that you've incorporated into your own world view.

Yes, knowledge has its limits but imagination encompasses the world. Knowledge comes into being in the anxiety of imagination. Ever since I was a child my imagination has been very strong, and I've always tried to remain true to that. Humankind has gotten where it is today thanks to its imagination. First they imagined, then they reached that which was right and true through a series of trials and errors. That's why imagination is so important.

When did you open your first store?

I was able to open my first store by the age of 20 thanks to having gathered a lot of experience in design since childhood. I called the store "Derin" (Deep). The reason I called it that is that I like the metaphorical aspect of that word. "Derin" metaphorically signifies the point that lies beyond the scope of the human brain and power. It's like the sign of perfection and an attempt to attain greater values and standards. In those days, I only put in my showroom the furniture I had personally designed and drawn up. I would place my newest design in the front window and then make a sketch of the product and highlight it with various lights, adding under it "Drawn by: Aziz Sarıyer". These days this might seem a very normal thing to do, but in those days it was very unusual. It was an innovative approach, but I didn't do it consciously, I just didn't because it came from within me.

How did the Derin brand develop?

I've always tried to put my designs in novel, innovative and revolutionary positions, and I never even thought about growing or expanding. In those days I got a lot of offers from various big brands and companies, but I never wanted become a mere industrialist. My artistic side has always weighed heavier. I always wanted to better myself rather than grow. In the last ten years we've become a world brand. We really took off after my son and partner Derin Sariyer joined the company.

How did you become international?

In those early days there weren't a lot of foreign and international publications that came to Turkey, but I found a way to get them. I would follow the latest trends and "Ever since I was a child my imagination has been very strong, and I've always tried to remain true to that. Humankind has gotten where it is today thanks to its imagination."

developments in the world of design. Then after I had accrued a certain degree of knowledge, I started attending international fairs. I started working with my son Derin in 1998. His young, enterprising and modern approach and outlook was a great benefit to me and we created a collection together. In this collection were also included names like Tanju Özergin, Defne Koz, Ayse Birsel, Bülent Özden, and Arif Özden. Later on we participated in avant garde exhibitions in Milan and in the U.S. Many of our designs won a lot of critical acclaim and awards, so the interest of the foreign press grew with that. I've created countless designs since I started out in this business, but it was only after 1995 that the media became aware of the Derin brand name.

You've always worked with Turkish designers. Is this out of principle?

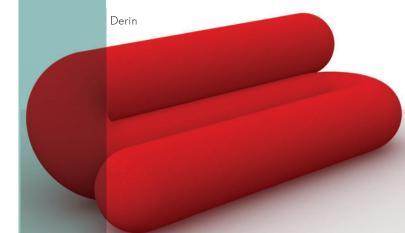

No, it's not necessarily a conscious decision to only work with Turkish designers. We always wanted to work with those people who were around us, who influenced and inspired us, and who shared the same outlook as us, so naturally these people were Turks. We have, however, wanted to work with foreigners as well, so as to give our work a different feel or outlook, but it didn't work out. Then the media focused on how all the designs at Derin were the work of Turks, so that actually then turned into an advantage for us.

Will this attitude continue?

No, Derin is now a world brand, and our doors are open to all promising and talented young designers.

"I was able to open my first store by the age of 20 thanks to having gathered a lot of experience in design since childhood. I called the store "Derin" (Deep). The reason I called it that is that I like the metaphorical aspect of that word."

What is more important when you design something?

I don't believe that a designer can create the perfect design. A designer must first design his or her own life and outlook. I think this is a very important factor. It doesn't matter how differently a designer looks at life, he has a certain foundation, a certain grounding, and I approach all my designs through my own dimensions and my own sense of what is right and good. Of course I'm also very interested in which institution I'm doing my designs for and who my designs will be appealing to. It's essential to be able to understand your client so as to be able to answer to their needs. These are the things I pay attention to first and foremost in a design, and the end product is a resemblance of me and my style.

What brands have you done designs for until now?

Firstly I've done a lot of designs for Derin. I'm the founder of Derin, but four years ago I passed everything on to my son, so now he runs the company. Besides Derin, I also do consulting and designs for world-famous brands. I'm now a freelance designer, and I've done work for names like Cappellini, Moroso, Zeritalia, Sica, AltreForme, Alparda, Hamam, Park, 888Design.

You did a different kind of project for Hamam, didn't you? Yes, for Hamam I designed items like towels and robes that are used in a Turkish bath. This was unusual work for me.

What differences are there between Derin Sariyer and Aziz Sariyer in terms of design?

Derin is a very successful designer. Both in the world and in Turkey, he's a person who stands out in his generation. His works are uniquely idiosyncratic and special. I think of objects as more mature and full, and I design them accordingly. Derin, on the other hand, has a fresher, finer and lighter approach and vision. That's what I expected of him anyway, and he's a designer who has established his own style. I could immediately recognize something he'd designed, even if it were in a totally different environment. I also think that he would recognize one of my designs immediately.

What do you think about design in Turkey in general?

We have many world renowned designers who are doing great work that is making a big mark in international design. The generation that came after us has also proven to be very talented and very successful. I think design in Turkey has gotten to a very good point and that it's going to get even better. It's not just me saying this either, because you'll hear the same from the world's leading designers and critics, who often mention Turkey as being one of the countries that is developing the most rapidly in terms of design. Design has become more and more important in general, with industrialists realizing its importance more and more. Life itself has become a design. These days it's not just the big names that place importance in design but even medium-sized businesses.

"I think design in Turkey has gotten to a very good point and that it's going to get even better. It's not just me saying this either, because you'll hear the same from the world's leading designers and critics."

All of these are for you to get rid of the stress of modern life and cleanse your emotions and generate a joi-de-vivre... "SOAPIS AN ESSENTIAL OF DAILY LIFE"

We have a talk with Evyap Kozmetik Marketing Director Mustafa Arin on the cosmetics sector.

Interview: Serli Gazer

an you tell us a little about your company?
Our journey started out in 1927 in Erzurum.
Today our company has spread out into over 100 countries, with an annual turnover of around US$600 million. We have two production facilities in Istanbul, along with another factory in Egypt.

Our company is not only active in the Turkish market but also overseas in countries like Russia, Belarus, Ukraine, Poland, Romania, Albania, Moldova and Kazakhstan – especially with our brands like Duru and Arko, mainly in the soap and men's cosmetics sector.

How long have you been in this business? I started out in this sector in 1990.

What products does your company produce?

Soap, shower gel, men's shaving appliances and after shave products, skincare products, haircare, mouth wash, hygienic paper products, and lately aromatic and perfumed cosmetics products.

What's your star product?

This is hard to answer because we consider all our products to be stars. But the products in which we plan to expand and invest in the most in the future are the soaps, skincare and pre-shaving products.

What countries do you export to?

Over 100 countries on various continents, especially Russia, Belarus, Ukraine, Poland, Romania, Albania, Moldova and Kazakhstan. We also export to the Middle East and Africa via our factory in Egypt. We continue to look to expand into new markets.

Do you participate in international fairs?

Yes, we place a lot of importance in international fairs and attend as many as we can.

How do you see the cosmetics sector in Turkey?

In Turkey, the cosmetics sector mostly involves people of high income brackets and the sector is mainly dominated by major international labels. Local brands have about a 30% share on the Turkish market, with imported products taking up a whopping 70%. There are new producers moving into the middle and lower-income range, and this should continue to expand in coming years.

Our aim to become an international brand and to create "10 world brands in 10 years" – which will include our Duru and Arko products – has led us to become part of the Turquality project, which is a state-supported effort that aims to help create and develop internationally recognized Turkish brand names. Even though the crisis has affected companies to some extent in this sector, I believe the cosmetics industry will continue to grow and strengthen.

How widespread is the use of personal cosmetics in Turkey? Is there an increase over the years?

This is a US$200 billion industry worldwide that seeks to reach out to ever newer areas and countries. There has been a particular increase in men's cosmetics in the latest years, spurring an overall growth of the market, both in Turkey and internationally. Especially after shave products have been gaining a bigger share of the market, which has meant growth in the sector all around.

Some think that the cosmetics sector wasn't badly affected by the economic crisis. Do you agree with this?

It's true that people like to continue to care for their personal appearance and hygiene in times of crisis when overall income levels are falling. This has been the case in previous times of crisis as well. Expenditure in this sector never really ends.

What are the products that everybody should have?

First and foremost hygiene products, namely soap. In terms of women's cosmetics, creams, lotions and body milks are essential. In terms of men's cosmetics it would have to be after-shave products.

"THE NEED FOR SOCIALISING INCREASES THE USE OF COSMETICS"

We talked to the General Manager of Erkul Kozmetik, Faize Atak, about their brand Golden Rose and the cosmetics sector.

Interview: Serli Gazer

an you tell us a little about your company?

Erkul Kozmetik, since its foundation in 1983, has a select position and a high market share in Turkey and the global market for colored cosmetics, thanks to its wide range of high quality products. With our Golden Rose brand, we've been producing a wide range of color cosmetics products and nail polishes for 20 years. Majority of our products are exported to 72 countries. In Turkey, our perfumery products are sold in pharmacies and chain stores of more than 3000 in total, and in Golden Shop stores.

What is the mission of Erkul Kozmetik?

Our mission is to provide the best quality products with the most reasonable prices and to keep the levels of customer satisfaction as high as possible. We also produce new products with an innovative approach, using the highest technology available within the cosmetics sector.

How long have you been involved in this profession?

I've been in the cosmetics sector and with Erkul Kozmetik for over 15 years. After I graduated as a Chemical Engineer, the first job I got was at Erkul Kozmetik. I've been general manager for many years now.

What is the product range of your firm?

As Erkul Kozmetik, alongside Golden Rose, with brands like Classics and Miss Selene, we produce nail polishes and all types of make-up products, such as lipstick, lip-gloss, mascara, eyeliner, foundation stick, powder, eye shadow, blusher and other products like perfumes, wet tissues, make-up removal tissues, intimate tissues, self tanning tissues and nail polish removers.

When you compare Golden Rose with other brands what privileges do you think your firm provides?

The biggest privilege Golden Rose offers is the availability of high quality products with a wide selection of colors together with reasonable prices.

What is your star product?

We're one of the few big producers of colored cosmetics and nail polishes in the world. Especially in terms of nail polish production, we're among the 5 biggest producers. We provide 20 different nail polish ranges with different features and around 1500 color choices.

Which countries do you export to?

We export to 72 countries, mostly Poland, Russia, Syria, Iran, Germany and Israel. We operate through distributors in most of these countries. We also have stores in some countries.

Does your firm participate in international fairs?

As we are a firm engaged mainly in exports, we participate in most of the foreign local and international fairs. In 2009, there will be around 29 international and local fairs which we will be attending.

What is the current situation of Turkish cosmetics sector? What do you foresee in the future? What should be done?

In Turkey the current size of the general cosmetics sector is around $1,5-2 billion. If we take into account the size of the global cosmetics market, which is around $200 billion, we can see that the Turkish market is considerably small. Turkey is a rapidly developing market. The population is young and the number of women working and living in urban areas is increasing, and so does the income rate. The need for socializing increases the use of cosmetics, initially in terms of personal care products and in the colored cosmetics.

There is a general belief that cosmetics firms actually benefit from financial crises, is this true?

It is claimed that during times of financial crises, women tend to indulge in cosmetics in order to feel better. There is truth in this, but in general we can't say that we have totally avoided the negative effects of the financial crisis. We did better than other sectors, but we too, feel the effects of the crisis both globally and in Turkey.

What do you think is the most essential cosmetics/ beauty product everyone must own?

Apart from personal care products, all women who want to look well groomed must carry in their beauty bags all types of make-up products beginning with lipstick, mascara and eyeliner.

Our cosmetics editor Nil Otova chose five make-up products from the Golden Rose range and tried them. These include basic products such as foundation and blusher, and complementary products like nail polish. Photos: Tuna Yılmaz

It was established by Armağan Kızıltan in 2001 under the name "Fixegoiste" with a modern high-technology factory was located at Tuzla Organize Sanayi Bölgesi (Tuzla Industrial Park) in a 7200 meter-square area of which 4800 meter-square was indoor. We've been a part of the Gulf Beauty Fair for the past three years. Last year we were at the International Plovdiv Fair in Bulgaria. This year in April we'll be at the Tripoli International Fair in Libya, and we'll also be at the Cosmoprof Fair.

How is the cosmetics sector doing in Turkey? What do you see for the future of this sector? What should be done?

I think that the sector has significantly renewed itself in the past few years. I believe that companies like us have really raised the standards of the sector with their new line of products, both in terms of the quality of the product itself and also packaging, design, aesthetic appeal, and of course our export potential. These days consumers are opting for local brands, which are competing head to head with foreign names. That proves to us that we're on the right track. I expect more support from the state in terms of research and development and also in terms of education in this particular field.

How widespread is use of your products in Turkey? Is there an increase in this respect?

In the past, when you talked about "cosmetics" people only thought of women. Now with our line of personal cosmetics products we've also brought men into the sector as one of our target markets. Also the rise of more and more professional and working women in Turkey has been good for this sector, since they like to use these products that keep their morale high during their long and often stressful working hours by giving them a fresh, radiant and beautiful look that lasts through the day and reflects on how they feel. This has of course meant higher sales.

How has the economic crisis hit the cosmetics sector?

It hasn't affected us well. The cosmetics sector, like the other sectors, has taken the necessary precautions to weather the storm. But of course the crisis continues, and we too are going to be affected in some way.

What do you think are the essential cosmetics products that everyone should have?

I think it's hair foam, but this of course will vary from person to person.

AFTER SHAVE CREAM Fixegoiste Crash After Shave Cream gives a soft creamy texture that not only soothes your skin but also gives a delightful light perfume odor that lasts you through the day.

Fixegoiste Crash After Shave Balm is a flowing and very effective product that is fresh, masculine and durable at the same time

AFTER SHAVE COLOGNE Fixegoiste Crash After Shave Cologne has a masculine smell that cools the skin and lasts through the day or night. It leaves no need for the application of any extra perfume.

WATERPROOF GEL

Fixegoiste Waterproof Gel is a strong product, and even just a dab is enough to see you through. It sets quickly, lasts a long time, and is easy to wash out.

HAIR MOUSSE AQUA RESISTANT FORMULA

Fixegoiste Hair Mousse is a silicon based mousse that is perfect for shaping and styling your hair. Although water-resistant, it's also easy to wash off. It protects the hair's softness and natural feel.

"WEAIMTO BECOME A WORLD BRAND"

Hunca Marketing Director Elif Öztürk says that they are planning on increasing their share in the foreign cosmetics market with the aim of becoming an internationally recognized brand. Here's the success story that is Hunca.

Interview: Serli Gazer Photos: Cihan Keskin

an you tell us about your company?
Hunca is one of the first cosmetics companies in Turkey, starting out in 1957 when it was established with 100% local investment. The founder was Adnan Hunca, and one of the first products that the company produced was the "Hunca Balsam". In 1998 Hunca became the first local cosmetics brand to win the ISO 9001
International Quality Certificate. Then it incorporated
MAY Kozmetik products – starting with "Carmina" – thereby heralding Hunca's entry into the color cosmetics sector. Hunca Kozmetik's production facilities and factory are located on a 22.000 meter-square area, with 400 employees and a 35% share of the local perfume sector, and a 22% share of the deodorant sector. With our latest product "SHE Colors" we're continuing our investments both at home and abroad.

How long have you been in this business? I've been in the cosmetics sector since 1997.

What sort of products does your company produce? Perfumes, deodorants, roll ons, deodorant sticks and color cosmetics.

What's your star product?

In women's cosmetics She perfume and deodorant, in men's Jagler perfume and deodorant.

What countries do you export to?

About 30 countries in Europe, Eastern Europe, Central Asia. We've also become a part of the Turquality program which is a state sponsored effort to help develop international branding for Turkish companies. We aim to expand our share in the international market with Turquality, especially in countries like Russia, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Algeria. We also want to expand in Europe.

Do you participate in international fairs?

Yes we do. Every year we are part of one of the most important cosmetics fairs in the world, the Cosmoprof Cosmetics Fair in Bologna, Italy.

How do you see the cosmetics sector in Turkey? What changes do you foresee in the future? What should be done?

The economic crisis has affected us as it has every sector. In 2009, we aim to try and do as well as we did the year before. In the long term, our aim is to present the best product for the most economical price to the average consumer, and to try and increase the share of the personal cosmetics market in Turkey, which is so far behind Europe. We also have ambitious targets in the export sector. We're about to enter markets that have never been penetrated before. A lot of Turkish companies have gotten far not as "private labels" but as they've focused and developed their branding strategies. As Turkish brands become more internationally recognized and conspicuous, I believe that the Turkish cosmetics sector will also leap ahead.

How widespread is the use of personal cosmetics in Turkey? Is there an increase over the years?

In Turkey 20 million people use personal cosmetics. The total size of the cosmetics sector in Turkey is about US$1.9 billion, with an estimated annual growth of up to 10-15%. When you consider that 70% of our population are under the age of 35%, you can see that this sector will continue to grow rapidly in the coming years.

Some say the crisis has not only not affected the cosmetics sector in a negative way, but has even spurred it on. Do you think this is true?

We've been through crises before and always came out strong as a company. We find that in crisis times people don't want to give up on looking and feeling good. So that view is correct to an extent.

What is the product that everybody should have? Deodorant.

COSMETICS BY NUMBERS

COSMETIC DEVELOPMENT IN TURKEY

In Turkey, in scientific terms, this sector has first emerged at the beginning of 1900S in the last era of the Ottoman State particularly as a result of initiatives taken by the entrepreneurs who have studied pharmacy and chemistry abroad and who then started the first pharmacy sector activities in Turkey and launched hand care and skincare creams of their own production.

In the period of 1950-1960 being the first step of industrialization process of Turkey, the sector activities have first started with the efforts of foreign investors or multinationals aimed at penetration into the Turkish market with their products, and the sector mainly dominated by import goods at the beginning has gradually proceeded towards the local industry. However, the dependence on foreign sources for active ingredients or raw materials has continued till date and is still continuing.

In 1980-1995 period, substantial investments on scientific products and modern technologies have speeded up, and the resulting modern production plants have for a long time served as toll and contract manufacturers for the well-known brands marketed and sold particularly in the European markets.

In the recent 1995-2008 period, however, the sector has started to use its past experiences for opening its doors to foreign markets by creating new products and its own brands, and this initiative seems to be successful and fruitful especially in the recent years. Thanks to its continuously improving R&D and production abilities, Turkish cosmetics sector has being gained a considerable competitive power. Optimal quality and cost alternatives are provided by the sector both for domestic and foreign buyers. An overview of the distribution of trade among countries and the structure

Turkish cosmetics exports to European countries is higher than the yearly increase rate of these countries. of EU cosmetics sector published every year by COLIPA (EU Cosmetic Toiletry Products and Perfume Manufacturers' Association) leads us to think that while the overall yearly increase rate of European countries is around 4-5%, the higher rates of increase in our exports to these countries in the recent years point out the enhancement of competitiveness of our products in terms of quality and price.

PRODUCTION IN COSMETICS SECTOR

Depending on the economic development in Turkey, both production and consumption of the cosmetics and personal care products are also increasing rapidly. The hair care products hold the greatest share in the sector product range, and shampoos account for approximately 59% of hair care products. Other items included in the sector product range are shaving products, depilatories, bath and shower products, soaps, lip and eye make-up materials, deodorants and antiperspirants, perfumes, eau de colognes, skincare and baby care products.

The most exported product group is soaps with an export value of USD$ 372 million in 2008, indicating 39% growth compared to 2007. That group also accounts for 45,31% for all cosmetics and personal care products' export.

The other products that are exported can be ranked as shaving preparations-body deodorants, make-up & beauty products, hair preparations, perfumes-eau de toilette, essential oils, oral & dental hygiene products and odoriferous mixtures respectively.

In a stably increasing trend in exports, COSMETICS SECTOR has continued its pace also in 2008 reaching USD$ 820,2 million export by an increase of 30,74% in value compared to 2007.

In 2008, the largest export markets of this sector were Iraq (USD$ 121,4 million with an increase of 81%), RUSSia (USD$ 110,4 million by an increase of 6%) and Ukraine (USD$ 55,2 million with an increase of 19%), followed by Germany, Romania, Bulgaria, Azerbaijan, Algeria, Poland and Iran. Her first collection Neo Ottoman was followed by Sultanate Reflections and Sarmal Conquest. The Sarmal Conquest has a modern, sophisticated and urban feel. Tunç states that her motifs have taken a more stylized form through the various collections up until 2009, noting that there is a growing sense of "lightness" and "ascendence" in her designs.

THE COLOR OF SMELLS

Oil and essence producer Froma Kimya has developed a guide entitled "The Meeting of Smell with Color" (Kokuların Renkle Buluşması). The guide has been prepared so as to ensure that the character of the product and the message it seeks to give is faithfully reflected in the packaging and presentation of the product. As a result, certain smells and aromas are matched and grouped to certain colors in the guide, and there is also the brief history of these colors (seven of them in all), along with a list of their sources.
